How do two graphic designers from Brisbane find themselves collaborating with the world's largest furniture retailer to produce functional furniture art that's sold all around the world?

INTERVIEW AND PICS BY DAN FIDLER

Kate and Joel Booy (of Strathpine and Ipswich respectively) studied design at Griffith Uni's College of Art before starting Studio Truly Truly in the Netherlands. To say Truly Truly make furniture would be almost fundamentally incorrect. IRL, the husband and wife team reconcile beautiful materials to create fascinating objects that function. They apply that artistic approach to furniture, textiles, lighting and more.

The duo was asked to deliver such an object for IKEA's designer PS 2017 range. IKEA's PS collections are designer endeavours that explore the future of design and the home through the eyes of progressive designers. For boutique outfits like Kate and Joel's Studio Truly Truly, the IKEA PS collaborations represent a professional experience on a scale that - quite literally - cannot be matched, exposing their products to a global audience that might otherwise be beyond their reach.

On this side of the counter, it gives people like you and me an opportunity to get our hands on thoughtful, forward thinking designer gear at IKEA prices.

Using the generously open brief, Kate and Joel created a rug and a cushion for the collection but it's the almost other-worldly steel framed sofa, lined with 18 small pillows that took our eye.

We had an opportunity to speak to them about it.

Hi guys, can you tell us about your path from graphic design in Brissy to the Netherlands?

K: We did graphic design for a while and then we got some projects that were in a museum window (at the Judith Wright Centre) that were really sculptural, with lighting and shapes that we designed. We realised that we like expressing ourselves in more dimensions

J: Graphic design didn't suit us perfectly. We found we enjoyed having something in the hand, dealing with the way the light falls on the object and manipulating the materials.

K: After realising that we liked to work with three dimensional design, Joel was inspired to study again in the Netherlands.

DON'T EVER WORK FOR FREE. SO MANY YOUNG DESIGNERS DO, BUT WHEN YOU WORK FOR FREE, PEOPLE WON'T VALUE YOUR WORK.

What did you study in the Netherlands?

J: Design again. Exact same degree [laughs].

K: The course had the same name but it's a completely different approach. In Europe it's a process driven conceptual approach, so there's a lot of working with your hands, experimentation, seeing what's special and what you can get out of that. So it's not like drawing a chair and that's it. Instead, you make the chair with a lot of exploring and testing.

Truly Truly has an art-like approach to design. What can you tell us about your process from design to finished product?

J: We start with materials. We find something within the materials that is interesting or satisfying to us in some way, once we have that inspiration we try to create a really simple expression of it.

The reason it feels a bit art-like I suppose is because we're not only trying to create a functional chair, we're trying to stimulate the senses.

Does form or function come first?

K: I don't think either takes preference.

J: They're absolutely interlinked. We won't ever make something that's just functional without being absolutely certain of its form as well. Form, function and something that gives an emotional response, to us, cannot be separated.

Your previous projects have a bespoke appeal to them. Was your process different working with IKEA?

K: No. Our process with IKEA stemmed from the same exploration of materials so whether we're applying that to a mass produced object that's used in the home or a more artistic piece, where function is less important, it's always the same process.

J: With IKEA, we were deconstructing how a sofa should be and found we were playing with form again. In the process of tensioning cushions you get this natural leaf shape and we noticed it was more beautiful than a plain cushion and all of sudden we were creating a new visual image. We didn't draw it and say this is how it should be.

How long did it take you to create the IKEA sofa?

K: It started with a week-long tour of textile producer's factory in India. So we saw a lot of techniques used with knitting and tufting and we asked questions and learned all about what was possible. We formed ideas of what could be interesting. When we came back we had a couple of weeks to think about it, then about a week to create the idea.

J: There was a deadline, but we didn't have to have to the finished product, it was a deadline to show what we were thinking with ideas and sketches.

K: Then it took months after that to develop and refine.

J: The PS collection was started in 2014, development finished in 2015 and is ready for worldwide release in 2017.

What did you learn from IKEA that you'll take back to Truly Truly?

J: A lot! It's been really good to work with IKEA. IKEA is actually the first manufacturer that we've worked with and they're a big manufacturer who are still taking on artistic ideas. A lot of the projects you'll see on our website are small, research driven objects. We learnt to cut back for practical reasons - simplifying materials, learning to be smarter.

K: We learnt that you can create the same desired outcome without being overcomplicated and to streamline the process and materials.

Were there more or less constraints on design?

J: IKEA has really given us freedom to have a crack and do what we really want to do - for the brief - we weren't asked to make a chair.

K: There was brief in terms of getting inspiration to get the ball rolling, but there weren't specific restrictions. I respect their bravery and trust.

How did the IKEA collab come about?

J: It was a series of events. IKEA was doing a creative tour around Eindhoven and seven out of 150 studios were recommended to the creative team to look at, ours was one of them. They looked at a visual identity exhibition we did for a building in Eindhoven, and then they came into our studio. They were efficient. They came into our studio at exactly the time they said they would, they spent seven minutes there and on the way out said "hey, do you want to come and work for IKEA?"

K: They asked us to collaborate on a textile collection first and invited us to the head office in Sweden. It was really exciting to be asked directly.

J: [laughing] When we got to the head office it was helpful that we didn't know who was who, because the head of IKEA - a super cool and calm but also very powerful guy - was in the room.

The IKEA PS 2017 range seeks to explore the future of design and the changing nature of the home, how do you see the nature of the home changing?

J: For us it already has. We live in a different environment to this. Our apartment is tiny so we don't have that much in it.

K: With this project we focussed on young adults and how they're moving around a lot, often it can be quite a nomadic lifestyle. Homes are expensive to buy and there are a lot of renters so we need to consider that with furnishing. Furniture needs adaptability, it should be customisable and flexible for future use in different ways

Do your PS 2017 designs address this change?

K: The sofa in particular has that customisability. It's up for personalisation – so people can express themselves through it however they like.

J: And with being able to separate an object into its materials, like you can with our sofa, means it's better for recycling, but also for materials that are 'in the cycle' already. Because it's just cushions that means you can use any cushions, not just IKEA ones.

What are your predictions for the future of design?

K: I hope that we can get material choices that are smarter and more innovative. With IKEA there's all this focus on sustainability, they're always looking to improve.

J: I think there will be a smartening up of the materials we use. I hope that we're all using materials that last longer - that the objects you own aren't wasteful. One of the reasons we deconstructed the sofa in this way is because we didn't want to have MDF glued to foam, and fabric sewn underneath that you can't separate. Our sofa is steel with cushions. The cushions are still cushions when you take them off. The steel frame can be reused and the steel itself can be recycled easily.

Bearing in mind that there are 17 designers featured in the IKEA PS 2017 collection, what is your favourite piece in the collection?

[laughs all around]

Both: Our sofa.

K: I'm really excited about how it has turned out to be honest. We are impressed that IKEA have made such a bold move with us and went for it...

J: We didn't think they'd go with it at first

K: We use one in the studio, it's where we take our breaks or read a book.

Okay, Okay, if you were asked to pick a favourite piece not by you?

J: That would be Matali Crasset's lamp.

K: The torch in the cage. It's portable but what's cool about it is that you can sit it on all different angles and the cage will support it.

J: It's a very French design.

Do you have any advice for aspiring designers?

J: You need to create the right stage for someone to see you and to know who you are. We decided that we needed to go to a big school where just by graduating you have a massive audience like the Design Academy Eindhoven.

K: ... though Australia is evolving and now there are more opportunities here now.

J: We've been noticing a lot more Australians getting an audience lately, which is great.

K: Another bit of advice I'd give is that with every project you take on you have to really give it your everything because you never know where it's going to take you.

J: And don't ever work for free. So many young designers do, but when you work for free, people won't value your work. When you charge, they will respect your work more.

K: Don't be scared to say no. If the work doesn't agree with you, you don't have to say yes.

What's next for Truly Truly:

We're currently working on two more projects for IKEA. They gave us a window to look in and asked us to create things in this vista

Thanks for your time and congratulations on the collaboration.

Keep an eye out for Kate and Joel's future projects with IKEA projects, which will be in the form of a limited edition range and another piece in IKEA's regular range in 2018.

The entire PS 2017 range is in stores now.

So how is the sofa? I'm not furniture reviewer but I've sat on few chairs and I like sitting on this one. The piece forgoes the usual IKEA naming convention but you won't miss it in store.

It's striking, larger than you expect, but still a small-space-aware corner chair that comfortably seats two people. It has two colourways, an arm that can switch sides, and you can push two together to make a couch. It's sturdily built on a steel frame and lined with removable pillows making it lean but also luxurious. As an object it's quite beautiful, clever, and best of all... super comfy on your bum.

RETAIL TRADING HOURS OVERHAUL

Overhaul of Queensland's retail trading hours to create jobs, protect workers and increase choice for consumers

Responding to the 13 recommendations of the trading hours review, Premier Annastacia Palaszczuk said current trading hours were restrictive, confusing and imposed extra costs on businesses, employees and consumers.

"The Government will make wide-ranging reforms to trading hours in Queensland to create more jobs," she said.

The retail trade industry in Queensland employs 255,000 Queenslanders or 11% of all jobs across the State, paying $9.9 billion in wages and accounting for $76 billion in sales.

Independent studies on the relaxation of trading hours have projected an economic benefit to Queensland ranging from $200 million (Queensland Competition Authority, 2013) and $253 million (Henry Ergas, 2014).

The National Retailers' Association estimated substantial deregulation would deliver a $440 million boost to Queensland's economy and add the equivalent of 3109 full-time jobs.

The Premier said the current regulation of trading hours is confusing for consumers and complex for retailers.

"Under the current trading hour regulations, you can buy a boat in Queensland on a Sunday, but not a car or a caravan," she said.

"There are 99 different trading hours' provisions. For Sunday alone, there are 30 different trading zones across Queensland."

"Once an independent retail shop has more than 20 employees on the shop floor, they fall into the non-exempt shop category. This acts as a brake on employment."

The legislation will standardise Sunday and public holiday trading across Queensland. Will allow Easter Sunday trading and allow butchers, special exhibitions and trade shows to trade without restriction. Will open up applications special trading for international events (the Commonwealth Games) and businesses selling motor vehicles will be able to trade on Sundays.

However, all non-exempt shops must be closed on Good Friday, ANZAC Day, Labour Day and Christmas Day.

To facilitate the change, there will be a five-year moratorium on further trading hours' applications to amend the allowable trading hours for non-exempt shops with a commitment to further review prior to the end of the moratorium period.

Industrial Relations Minister Grace Grace said a massive 99 trading hour provisions, contained in over 40 pages of orders would be replaced by just six.

"These changes simplify and bring uniformity to trading hours' arrangements, allowing retailers to set their hours to best service their customers' needs," she said.

"This is a huge reduction in red tape that will mean more jobs for Queenslanders, a stronger economy, and healthier retail competition – which means lower prices for customers.

"Importantly, no-one will be made to work any of the additional hours allowed by the changes unless they have voluntarily agreed to do so."

There was excitement off pitch also when nearly 100 Russell Coights packed the stadium

BRISBANE GLOBAL RUGBY TENS

The inaugural Brisbane Global Rugby Tens a success both on and off the pitch.

The new event saw two day ticket sales topping 29,000 with a live audience of close to 60,000 able to check out the action at Suncorp Stadium over the weekend of February 11 and 12. Peak attendance (the highest number of ticket holders inside the stadium at any one point) occurred on Saturday afternoon, when over 24,000 ticket holders packed into the shaded side of the stadium.

"Considering the extreme weather over the weekend we were delighted with the turnout," Duco Events Australia chief executive Rachael Carroll said.

New Zealand Super Rugby team The Chiefs were crowned champions of the 2017 Brisbane Global Rugby Tens, defeating the Crusaders 12-5 in a thrilling final at Suncorp Stadium to etch their name in history as the inaugural winners of the tournament.

The Chiefs overcame an early 5-0 deficit to produce a fitting tribute to Sione Lauaki, the former All Black and Chief who passed away recently at the age of 35.

Minister for Tourism and Major Events, Kate Jones, said the inaugural Brisbane Global Rugby Tens was a signature addition to Tourism and Events Queensland's $A460 million major events calendar.

"This exciting new event has been a real celebration of world-class rugby in a world-class stadium, showcasing Queensland to a global audience," Ms Jones said.

"This competition, with its carnival atmosphere, has provided a fantastic experience for rugby fans in its first year attracting thousands of interstate and international visitors.

"We expect Rugby Tens will continue to grow from strength to strength and help to reinforce Queensland's reputation as a premier event destination."

Queensland Reds wildcard Radike Samo's massive hit on All Blacks centre Seta Tamanivalu on day one saw him awarded the trophy for producing the tournament's outstanding defensive play.

The award will now be named the "Radike Samo Best Defensive Play Award".

Shaun Stevenson was named MVP of the final and also claimed the Chris Latham trophy for being the tournament's top try scorer.

DOB IN A DRUG DEALER

Anonymously online

Police Minister Mark Ryan, Superintendent David Tucker and Detective Superintendent Jon Wacker launched a new reporting tool to help police tackle the supply and distribution of ice in the community recently.

QPS Community Contact Command Superintendent David Tucker said the community played an integral role in helping police disrupt crime, providing information that could form the foundation of an investigation or the piece of a puzzle that is the obstacle to helping solve a protracted or cold case.

"To ensure the public has the ability to provide this crucial information, the QPS has developed an online reporting tool, specifically focused on information relating to the distribution and possession of ice," Superintendent Tucker said.

"The online tool not only complements the existing suite of resources available to the public, including Crime Stoppers and Policelink but allows a community who is already online the ability to tell us what they know using a platform they are already familiar with."

The tool can be anonymous, allowing anyone the opportunity to provide police what they know, but the user can also provide their email address, should they wish to provide further information in future.

"Information provided in the form will be used by police to drive operational responses and target their resources, honing in on those selling these horrendous drugs to our young people," Superintendent Tucker said.

Police Minister Mark Ryan said the Queensland Police Service does a tremendous job in this area, but cannot achieve this in isolation.

"With intelligence suggesting the threat posed by organised syndicates is of particular concern, we must ensure we provide police the support they need to win this war," Minister Ryan said.

"In 2015 our Government committed $20 million over four years to allow for the development of strategies, the expansion of capabilities and the formation of systems to tackle this issue both now and into the future.

"We know drugs are the fuel that keeps organised crime going. It is essential we target the source in order to get the most effective results."

The online form will be available from <https://www.police.qld.gov.au/apps/reports/ReportaDrugDealer> and anyone with information is encouraged to hop online and provide details that could help fight dangerous drugs.

Information provided will be used by police to drive operational responses and target their resources

CIVIL AVIATION SAFETY AUTHORITY TO HELP YOU DRONE SAFE

Web-based app to help drone flyers fly safely and responsibly.

The Civil Aviation Safety Authority (CASA) has teamed up with specialist company, Drone Complier, to develop a smartphone, tablet and web-based app to help drone flyers fly safely and responsibly.

The app, called 'Can I fly there?' is due to be launched in May this year.

The app will allow those flying drones for fun, or under the new sub-2kg commercial category to enter a location where they are proposing to fly. It will then flag nearby 'no-drone zones' such as airports, helicopter landing areas and other restricted areas.

It will also flag 'no-drone zones' areas where emergency services such as firefighters are operating.

potential for them to fly their drone inadvertently in a way that might cause a threat to aircraft or other people.

'This app will provide them with the relevant content and services they expect to have at their fingertips when out flying.'

Drone Complier's Chief Executive Officer, Wayne Rochat, said that they were excited to have been selected by CASA to support the Australian sub 2kg drone category.

'Our software is focused on ensuring simple drone compliance, delivering safety and simplicity for both hobbyist and enterprise customers,' Mr Rochat said.

FOOD TRUCKS LEAD THE WAY IN SAFE EATING

*FOOD TRUCKS HAVE REALLY BLOWN
US AWAY WITH HOW SERIOUSLY
THEY TAKE THEIR FOOD SAFETY,
WITH A WHOPPING 96 PER CENT
ACHIEVING AN EATSAFE RATING OF

Humble food trucks, which are popping up across the city, are leading the way when it comes to culinary health and safety, with 96 per cent of Brisbane food trucks achieving exceptionally high food safety standards in 2016, as part of Council's EatSafe program.

Brisbane Lord Mayor Graham Quirk said Brisbane City Council was working closely with food trucks, restaurants and cafés to ensure people could have greater confidence when dining out in Brisbane.

"Council carried out over 6,400 food safety inspections last year, including 136 food trucks, as part of our commitment to enforce stringent food hygiene requirements," Cr Quirk said.

"Food trucks are assessed on a strict criteria, which includes assessments of how food is thawed, if it is being left on the counter too long, if ingredients are refrigerated appropriately and if the business is clean and well maintained.

"Food trucks have really blown us away with how seriously they take their food safety, with a whopping 96 per cent achieving an EatSafe rating of three and above."

"An ever-increasing number of people are seeking out their favourite travelling treats across Brisbane, so it's great to see such positive results in an emerging industry.

"Demand for establishing mobile food businesses in our city is booming and Brisbane foodies continue to be spoiled for choice, with the number of new food trucks nearly doubling from when they first joined the EatSafe program in 2010."

Cr Quirk said EatSafe was a rewards-based incentive, with compliant businesses eligible for annual licence fee discounts and opportunities to promote their business by displaying their star rating in-store and on Council's website.

"Last year alone, Council carried out more than 1,000 inspections in response to feedback and complaints as part of its commitment to enforce stringent food hygiene requirements," he said.

"6,538 food businesses achieved an EatSafe rating of three and above, while Council continues to work with outlets, through education and online training, that are rated between zero and two."

Pain Free – Stress Free Dentistry!

Smiles Dental Care in Margate has just celebrated its sixth birthday, and is delighted that it has become a favourite among residents. The newer Mango Hill practice is fast becoming just as popular with residents in that area. With a fresh modern approach, and the latest equipment and technology, patients no longer need to fear going to the Dentist, as one of their most popular services is pain free and stress free Dentistry.

The University of Adelaide's recent survey suggests that approximately 63% of Australians ignore dental health due to fear of going to the Dentist.

"We understand that most people are nervous when it comes to going to the dentist, so we offer them a way to relax and calmly gain the smile they want and deserve. Our patients are loving the services we provide and no longer put off coming in to see us." says Principal Dentist Dr Amol Dabholkar.

Smiles Dental Care have partnered with experienced Anaesthesiologist Dr Oscar Cifuentes for Sedation Dentistry. Dr Cifuentes is the saviour for nervous dental patients as he enables them to receive necessary dental treatments while they sleep in the dental chair. With no potentially expensive hospital fees, and often a Medicare rebate, this treatment option has become more affordable for people who generally would avoid going to the Dentist.

Sedation Dentistry is beneficial for a wide range of people with various dental fears and phobias, which affects a large number of the population. Dental phobias, a fear of needles, and patients with a strong gag reflex, or patients requiring complex dental treatment are just some of the types of patients that have been able to successfully receive treatment with Sedation Dentistry.

Smiles Dental Care's main goal is to deliver pain free and stress free dentistry to all patients in a pleasant and caring environment. Experience has proven that it is possible for even the most fearful of patients to be successfully treated with minimal pain and stress with Dentistry under sedation.

"I urge residents not to put off their dental treatments any longer. Dentistry has come a long way in recent years and with all the technology we have here at Smiles Dental Care there is no need to fear the dentist anymore!" says Dr Dabholkar.

I DON'T WANT TO GO HOME AFTER WORK ANYMORE

Hi Leonie,

I always read the Messenger and would like you to look (as best you can) at my following concern. I married my wife 23 years ago. She was a nurse and I was a wardman and in the beginning she had tons of energy and was very career focused.

Around 10 years ago she more or less just dropped her bundle saying she wanted to be a stay at home mom to our only child (a daughter who is now 18 and living with her boyfriend. So the child she was staying home for has gone but she won't go back to work.

She says she has done enough and that the house is paid for and we can live OK on my wage. Well we can live on my wages but we can't save, replace cars or go on holidays.

My wife takes nasty swipes at me constantly and I can't remember the last time we had a civil conversation. It's been like this for years. She tells me she hates my guts but the hand is always out for the money. She is constantly saying she is too sick to clean the house and moans constantly that we have nothing. She is not sick. She does not have depression (we have had all the screening done) she is just bone lazy and it's all we fight about these days.

I'm not sure if I still even love her and I'm at the end of my rope. She loves your weekly piece in the messenger but will not go for couples counselling. She would rather lay in bed half the day and watch TV than do any work of any kind. She has gained an enormous amount of weight and now has to have her sugars tested each fortnight.

I find that I don't want to go home after work anymore feeling very low about my circumstances. How can you fix a marriage when only one person is working at it?

Name withheld/Griffin

Hi,

The simple answer is that you can't fix a marriage when only one person wants to fix it. There are times when a marriage should be ended. One of these times is when couples counselling has not bought a cohesive way to move forward (counselling is not only about saving a relationship. It's also about finding out if in fact it should be saved) so there is no guarantee that counselling would save the marriage.

Another time, as in your case, can be if one partner will not consider doing the work to fix the issues but is happy to keep living with things the way they are. In which case there is little hope for the marriage to survive. It's a huge red flag if nothing ever gets resolved and you find yourself bickering constantly and having the same arguments over and over with no resolution. Disagreeing in a marriage is normal but if the fighting is constant, there is no intimacy and there is never any forward movement, the relationship could be called toxic. Intimacy is very important to a relationship because skin on skin contact helps to keep us bonded. If we are cuddling and kissing often, making love, showering together and holding each other while we watch TV and so on, we are releasing bonding hormones called Oxytocins. Often called the "cuddle hormone" this helps us stay bonded to each other. If one partner is hurtful with their comments or physically or emotionally abusive things have to change. Either the marriage gets help or the healthy choice is to end the union.

You might consider asking yourself why you stay in the face of such abuse and relationship apathy when your child is gone and you have no religious constraints making you stay.

Perhaps consider asking your wife if she will work on the marriage one last time, making it clear that you are seeking to end the marriage if she chooses not to engage with you in sorting out your issues.

Til next week, Leonie

STEREOTYPES SHACKLE RECOVERING DRUG USERS

WRITES DOCTOR ANITA GREEN, BRISBANE NORTH PHN

Negative stereotypes about drug-users are continually perpetuated in the media, but a local study has found this practice may be hindering the recovery of injecting drug-users.

A study led by University of Queensland School of Psychology researcher Dr Courtney von Hippel found that people recovering from substance dependence find it harder to function within society if they believe they are the target of stereotypes.

"People with a history of drug abuse are often regarded as irresponsible, unreliable and less trustworthy," Dr von Hippel said.

"This societal disapproval can result in feelings of 'stereotype threat', or the belief that they're the target of demeaning stereotypes.

"Stereotype threat can have a detrimental effect on performance, with the ironic consequence that targets of stereotypes can confirm the very stereotype they are trying to deny," he said.

Dr von Hippel said that in some cases, all it takes for a drug-user stereotype to become a reality is the belief that others are stereotyping them.

The study, published in the British Journal of Clinical Psychology, involved 80 participants from a methadone outpatient program.

"Participants who reported high levels of stereotype threat in relation to their drug history also reported poorer social function," Dr von Hippel said.

"Effective social functioning, such as independent living and the ability to successfully engage in social interactions and activities, represents a major part of recovery and is also a good predictor of retention in methadone maintenance programs," he said.

Health Direct Australia, a Government-owned, not-for-profit organisation helps Australians to manage their health by providing round-the-clock access to health information.

It advises that it may not always be immediately obvious when a loved one is using drugs, despite the stereotypes.

Health Direct Australia recommends talking honestly to the person you are worried about, and to look out for certain signs in the person's environment that may point to drug use.

These include burnt foil, which may have been used for smoking heroin, tiny pieces of cling wrap, paper or card used to wrap drugs.

Also look out for hand rolled cigarettes with filters made from cardboard, syringes, pipes and plastic bottles or drink cans that have been pierced or tampered with.

Changes in behaviour can also be a sign that someone is using drugs.

Such changes can include a person appearing withdrawn or inactive, or extreme changes in mood, increased spending or loss of possessions, changes in sleeping patterns and appearing agitated or restless.

The good news is more drug and alcohol treatment services are available in North Brisbane for people who need support to overcome methamphetamine (ice) and other forms of substance dependence.

Brisbane North PHN has commissioned Lives Lived Well and the Institute for Urban Indigenous Health (IUIH) to deliver additional alcohol and other drug treatment services to help people regain control over their lives and break the cycle of dependence.

Anyone experiencing drug or alcohol problems can call Lives Lived Well on 1300 727 957. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people can also call the IUIH on 07 3648 9500.

EMOTIONAL FREEDOM TECHNIQUE FOR STRESS AND ANXIETY

By Marion Grimshaw, Zen Chi Natural Therapies

Stress and anxiety are part and parcel of everyday life, and are increasingly a part of our fast paced modern lifestyles. People are looking for natural alternatives to stress management, and Emotional Freedom Technique is one avenue worth examining.

What is Emotional Freedom Technique?

Emotional Freedom Technique (EFT) is based on the Chinese meridian system, with the body comprised of - and divided into - energy fields. Any blockages to these energy fields are viewed as the primary source of psychological and physical problems. EFT makes use of aspects of Chinese traditional medicine, particularly acupressure to relieve a wide range of issues including emotional issues such as depression, fears and phobias, panic attacks, compulsions; including stress and anxiety. This is achieved by a series of tapping motions on selected pressure points. As well as these emotional aspects, EFT provides relief for a range of physical ailments including headaches, pain management and weight issues.

Stress and Anxiety

Stress and anxiety affects people in different ways. Those less able to deal with stress may exhibit symptoms that include irritability, sensitivity to criticism, loss of concentration and poor sleep patterns. Managing stress is one way of protecting yourself from the potential negative health implications. Some easy ways of managing stress include exercising regularly, maintaining a healthy diet, avoiding stressful situations, sleeping well and finding ways to relax and enjoy yourself. Other disciplines such as yoga, meditation and EFT are increasingly utilised alongside these measures to aid recovery and healing.

NL is beautiful and so are it's residents

in reply to Once beautiful suburb now long gone:

Wake up to yourself Long Term Resident!

Count yourself lucky, talk about glass half empty. If you were to sell up and reap a decent profit because of all the close at hand amenities North Lakes has to offer, good luck in finding another suburb that has as much.

North Lakes is beautiful and so are it's residents. I am so happy & proud to live here and the envy of people in other suburbs.

As for your statement (disastrous traffic movements) yes they could be quicker in some instances but disastrous. Perhaps you could use that word to better describe a massive earthquake or fire & use your time waiting to count your blessings.

A happy & grateful North Lakes resident

We are all poorer for the Omnibus Bill debate

So here we are again, with politicians bouncing the issue of better support for people with a disability around the floor of Parliament House like the proverbial football. Unfortunately all that's being achieved is a massive own-goal.

At what point did it seem like a good idea to pit welfare and families against the National Disability Insurance Scheme? For starters, it's not even a logical argument when the Productivity Commission found that the NDIS would be MORE cost effective than the status quo.

So, having dispensed with the notion that there was a cheaper alternative, the only thing that can be called into question is that of 'need'. Do our politicians believe that people with a disability need and deserve more and better than they've historically received, or don't they?

People across this country have suffered immeasurably as a result of a devastatingly underfunded disability sector. And now, implicitly, they're being asked to apologise for getting what they need, to the detriment of their fellow citizens.

I can only imagine what it must feel like for someone who has been waiting desperately for support, as they watch this debacle play out in Parliament and across media. From finally being told that you had a right to a fulfilling life – that you are a valued member of your community and part of this country's fabric – to having your desperation publicly weighed and measured against that of some of the poorest members of our community. All our leaders have succeeded in doing is creating and debating a humiliating hierarchy of need.

There was never any question that the introduction of the NDIS would be a steep learning curve, and an expensive one at that, but giving with one hand while taking away with the other is downright cruelty. This is a turbulent time – people who have been struggling are desperate to ensure that this opportunity does not slip through their fingers, and those currently reliant on support are terrified of losing what they fought long and hard to secure. Why add to their stress? Why make them winners or losers in an unnecessary political showpiece?

Because ultimately, in social and moral terms, we are all the poorer for this debate.

Andrew Donne, Endeavour Foundation Chief Executive

QUEENSLAND'S BEST BUILDINGS AND BRIGHTEST TALENT

Vie for awards at the Property Council of Australia's Innovation and Excellence Awards

Heritage buildings, shopping centres and large-scale communities are among the 24 finalists from Queensland vying for recognition at the 2017 Property Council of Australia / Rider Levett Bucknall Innovation and Excellence Awards in May.

The awards program, now in its 35th year of partnership with RLB, showcases the exceptional projects, innovative solutions and outstanding achievements of Australia's property industry.

"The calibre of finalists from Queensland reflects our long-standing commitment to high-quality, innovative developments that deliver jobs, prosperity and strong communities," says Chris Mountford, the Property Council's Queensland Executive Director.

"This year, we've got everything from affordable housing to high-end offices, world-leading healthcare and research facilities and large-scale master-planned communities that will be home to thousands of Queensland families," Mr Mountford adds.

Two Queensland developments are in contention for the coveted Woods Bagot Award for Best Public Building: the University of Queensland's Oral Health Centre and the Centre for Children's Health Research at the Lady Cilento Children's Hospital.

"At nearly 30,000 sqm in size, UQ's Oral Health Centre is the largest and most comprehensive facility of its type in the southern hemisphere, while the state-of-the-art Centre for Children's Health Research is the only dedicated child and adolescent research centre in Queensland," Mr Mountford explains.

"The visionary building design at both of these facilities plays an integral role in fostering collaboration, knowledge sharing and innovative work practices."

Brisbane's sparkling office tower at 480 Queen Street is contesting the SAS International Award for Best Office Development.

"480 Queen Street is more a vertical village than an office. Its inspired design features a public park on the fourth floor and trees on the 32nd, drawing both blue chip tenants and Brisbane's general public to this spectacular new destination," Mr Mountford says.

Three large-scale developments are in the running for the EPM Projects Award for Best Master Planned Community.

"Queensland has built a solid reputation for excellence in master-planned communities, and Fitzgibbon Chase, Springfield Lakes and North Lakes each underscore the innovative approaches that can enhance the natural environment while enriching the lives of residents," Mr Mountford says.

All national development finalists are in the running for the industry's most coveted prize – the Rider Levett Bucknall Australian Development of the Year award. All development projects named as finalists are also vying for the State Development of the Year award in their state.

Managing Director of Rider Levett Bucknall Queensland, David Stewart, says that the 141 finalists across 20 categories highlight the importance and influence of the awards.

"We have proudly partnered with the Property Council of Australia to present these awards since 1982," Mr Stewart says.

"Over that time, the number of categories and entrants have grown, and the quality of the entries from Queensland – demonstrating technological innovation, design excellence, efficiency and sustainability – has evolved enormously," Mr Stewart adds.

National award winners will be announced at the 2017 Property Council of Australia / Rider Levett Bucknall Innovation and Excellence Awards Gala Dinner, to be held at the International Convention Centre Sydney on Friday 5 May 2017. Tickets are now on sale from www.propertycouncilawards.com.au/

Huge demand for Vantage Homes QLD terrace and townhouse developments

Designer kitchen from the Vantage Homes terrace display

Bright and spacious main bedrooms, most with walk in robes and ensuite

The opportunity to enjoy everything about the Queensland lifestyle is the driving force behind the strong demand and sales in the North Brisbane Region according to Vantage Homes Sales Executive Sarah Caddy.

“We are living in an age where many buyers don’t want to spend their time mowing lawns and doing maintenance around the home. Queensland is all about enjoying the great outdoors like our stunning beaches, waterways, parks and hinterland and living in a terrace home or townhouse enables residents to live life to the fullest”.

Ms Caddy said buyers have ranged from first home owners who are taking advantage of up to $30,000 in Government concession right through to baby boomers and retirees who prefer to lead a ‘lock up and leave’ lifestyle.

“With Terraces and Townhouses now selling from $359,000 in Kallangur, Bracken Ridge, Dakabin, Mango Hill and throughout the Sunshine Coast there’s plenty for people to choose from.

Our standard range and fixed price packages ensure that the house is ready to move in. We include fixtures such as stone benchtops throughout, stainless steel Westinghouse appliances, tiles to living areas and carpets in bedrooms, blockout blinds and flyscreens, fencing, landscaping and even your letter box and washing line.” Sarah said.

Vantage has built a reputation across Queensland as a builder with an emphasis on ‘On time and on budget’ delivery. Vantage’s design portfolio has grown to include a range of award winning homes, architectural abodes as well as terraces and townhomes and it’s that diversity which sets Vantage apart from its competitors.

Development moves forward

The Dakabin Crossing Luxury Townhouse Development at 140 Alma Road, Dakabin has now begun. The initial works commenced early in February and will see 135 townhouses and terraces completed over the next 18 months.

The development includes a swimming pool, park with BBQs, walking tracks and a retail centre which will include cafe, bakery, convenience store and other stores. There is also an on-site caretaker that will live in the manager's residence and maintain the development.

As part of the development, Linzen Property Group, will bring major infrastructure in terms of a road upgrade to Alma Road as well as the future sewerage system to support the Dakabin Train Station upgrade and is working closely with the Dakabin Station Action Group.

Dakabin Train Station is approximately a few minutes walk and is on the Brisbane line and one stop from Petrie which is the University precinct that is promised to open with student intakes in 2020.

Sales of the development have seen both investors and first home buyers grabbing the opportunity for quality housing in the North Lakes expansion area of Dakabin. Stage 1 has been completely sold out with Stage 2 now 80% sold. You can find out more at www.dakabincrossing.com.au.
